Acknowledgements

This volume of Paroles gelées is the result of the commitment, contributions, and enthusiasm of many people and organizations. The editors thank the presenters, moderators, and volunteers who participated in the success of the Annual UCLA Department of French and Francophone Studies Graduate Conference. A special thanks to our keynote speakers, Tom Conley and Jean-Marie Apostolidès, for prompting audience members to reflect on forms of spectatorship and interaction. We also extend thanks to our roundtable participants, who invested their full effort in generating a discussion on the interdependence of the self and the collective in addition to evolving media.

Our gratitude to Malina Stefanovska and Dominic Thomas for their continued guidance and support of the graduate student conference and Paroles gelées. Furthermore, we would like to acknowledge the crucial roles of Laura Clennon and Gina White who assisted with coordination and planning. We thank all those who sent articles for review to this volume of Paroles gelées. It has been a pleasure to work with the authors of the exciting research projects featured in the articles that follow. We sincerely thank them for their patience and cooperation. This publication would not have been possible without the help of reviewers and copyeditors from various institutions and disciplines. Your role was integral to the editing process. Last but not least, many thanks go to Stacey Meeker, in helping guide our team to publication.
